

SOCIAL CONTRACT

These are the rules we all agree to follow. By being here, you agree to this contract.

01 English only — always

We speak, write, and communicate in English only. This includes conversations in the lab, messages on Slack and email, code comments, and all presentations. Programming is done in English. The more you use it, the better you get.

02 This is not school — it is an apprenticeship

You are here to learn by doing real work. Tutorials are not for watching only — you must follow along and complete the work yourself.

03 Attendance is compulsory

You must be here every day. Repeated absence without a valid reason is a dismissible offence. If you cannot attend, notify your facilitator before your session starts.

04 Meet your deadlines

If you need more time, ask before the deadline — never after. Plan your work so you finish required features first before adding extras.

05 Email and Slack are your work tools

You must be active on both platforms during work hours. Check your messages. Respond professionally. This is how developers communicate in the real world.

06 Be a team player — and be kind

Support your teammates. Share what you know. Celebrate each other's progress. Be helpful, be friendly, and be the colleague you would want beside you. We grow together or we do not grow at all.

07 Keep the lab clean and the equipment safe

Treat the machines and the space with respect. Leave the lab the way you would want to find it.

08 No unauthorised visitors

Friends and family may not enter the lab. This is a professional workspace.

09 Uphold your rights and respect others

We follow the Bill of Rights of South Africa. Treat every person in this space with dignity and fairness.
